

2011 POTTED DAYLILIES

For 2011, we will be offering 26 new potted daylilies. These new potted offerings are identified in our general daylily listing with the word "POTS" in the description..

Why purchase a potted daylily?

- The majority of our potted daylilies are our newest cultivar offerings for the year.
- A potted daylily makes a nice gift we can wrap in florist foil at no extra cost to you. (This is a nicer gift than a bare-root plant you would purchase for your garden and transport home in a recycled plastic bag.)
- Potted daylilies don't have to be immediately put into the ground if the weather is not cooperating or you want to bring the plants to a vacation home.

All new daylily varieties are in bold print and underlined

WE ARE NOW IN THE HAYFIELD !

For the past two years, we have been working towards expanding our daylily sales gardens out into the three acre hayfield that is located just on the other side of the row of pine trees for those of you that have visited our farm in the past. In 2009, we got a seasonal water line from the house out to that area and we prepared 30 4 x 20 foot beds for planting. In 2010, we prepared an additional 30 beds for a total of 60 and of the sixty beds, three were planted with different lavender cultivars as an experiment to see how well the plants would do in an open field on the north side of the farm before we potentially expand this crop. The balance of the twenty-seven beds were planted with daylilies from both our pre-existing fields as well as some new varieties that we will be offering this year. So, when at the farm and after you have walked our original daylily gardens that we designated as Gardens A through G, take a short stroll across our driveway and just beyond the row of pines to the newly planted area. Approximately 1/3 of the three acres have the planting beds and the balance is still a hayfield that is cut and harvested by our farming neighbor. Only time will tell how much longer the hay will be harvested or when the three acres will be fully planted with lavender and daylilies. Only the "man upstairs" (or is it a woman???) knows if we will have the strength and time remaining to accomplish this goal.
